

Marking Important Milestones in Mallinckrodt's Proposed Acquisition of Questcor

- SEC S-4 Filing Complete and Shareholder Proxy Solicitation Process Begins

Today, Mallinckrodt plc and Questcor Pharmaceuticals, Inc. issued a joint press release providing an update on our pending transaction. We thought it would be helpful to explain what that update means and where we are in the process.

On May 16, 2014, Mallinckrodt plc filed a "Form S-4 registration statement," which is a document that Mallinckrodt was required to file with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) in connection with the transaction. A big part of the registration statement is what is called a "joint proxy statement/prospectus". It is called a joint proxy statement because both Mallinckrodt and Questcor will use it to solicit proxies (or votes) in favor of the transaction, and a prospectus (of Mallinckrodt) because it contains information about the Mallinckrodt shares that will be issued to Questcor shareholders as part of the transaction. The joint proxy statement/prospectus includes important information about the transaction and the Mallinckrodt shares.

On Friday, July 11, 2014, as part of the process in which the SEC reviewed the Form S-4 registration statement, the SEC declared the registration statement effective. This means that the companies may mail the joint proxy statement/prospectus to their respective shareholders. The July 11 "declaration of effectiveness" was an important milestone toward the completion of the acquisition.

The joint press release issued by Mallinckrodt and Questcor today essentially announces that the Form S-4 registration statement is effective, and notes important dates relating to the upcoming shareholder meetings and anticipated closing of the transaction. The mailing process also officially begins today.

Critical next steps that must be completed are for Questcor to obtain the approval of its shareholders for the proposed transaction; and for Mallinckrodt to obtain the approval of its shareholders for the issuance of Mallinckrodt shares that will be issued to Questcor shareholders as part of the overall consideration (or price) of the transaction.

Special meetings of the respective shareholders of each company have been scheduled for August 14, 2014. The Mallinckrodt meeting will take place in Dublin, Ireland, and the Questcor meeting will occur in Costa Mesa, California, near Questcor's Anaheim office. The voting process allows for shareholders to cast their votes either in person or by proxy. If you are a shareholder (including through ownership of Questcor restricted shares), you should read the joint proxy statement/prospectus to understand how you may cast your vote.

If the transaction is approved by each company's shareholders and the other closing conditions are satisfied, the next step will be to close the transaction shortly after the shareholder meetings. When all these steps are finished, Mallinckrodt will issue a press release announcing that the transaction is complete and file certain additional documents with the SEC.

SIDEBAR DEFINITIONS:

SEC Form S-4 Registration Statement: A document filed with the SEC by a company that is issuing shares in a transaction such as a merger or acquisition. A part of the Form S-4 is mailed to shareholders to provide information related to the transaction and the shares being issued and to solicit proxy votes.

Prospectus: A formal legal document, which is required by, and filed with, the SEC, which provides details about an investment offering. The purpose of a prospectus is to provide facts for an investor to make an informed investment decision.

Declared Effective by SEC: Formal notice from the SEC that it ‘declares effective’ the Form S-4 filing (registration statement), which allows the mailing to take place.

Shareholder Voting and Proxy Voting: Shareholder voting is the primary means by which investors (or shareholders) can influence a company’s operations. Therefore, it’s very important that shareholders vote on major transactions proposed by the company, and that they make their decisions on how to vote based on a full understanding of the information and legal documentation presented to them.

Shareholders can ‘vote their shares’ in person at a live shareholder meeting. However, because many shareholders may not be able to attend a shareholder meeting, companies typically use a proxy voting process. As described, a mailing is sent to shareholders containing detailed information about the transaction. Shareholders can then vote by submitting a proxy card that is included with the document mailed to them, or they often can vote in other ways (such as on the Internet or by telephone). All of the votes (whether in person or by proxy) are then tallied up after the shareholder meeting.
